BETTER LATE THAN NEVER may be said of the declaration by the New York democrats that they will no longer submit to the pecuniary dictation in nominating conventions of John Kelly. Had this been done four years ago, by the democratic masses, the party would not to-day be gritting its teeth over the overwhelming defeat that has recently overtaken it.

Samuel J. Tilden saw the danger six years ago, and tried to induce the party to guard against it while it could be done. He crippled the Tammany organization, but was unable to kill it outright. Four years ago and again two years afterwards he wanted the party to squelch the scoundrelly Kelly and thus make victory certain; but the democracy was not so far-seeing as the sage of Gramercy, and now must suffer the consequences. Kelly defied the democrats in New York last year, and to him more than to any other individual in the line of the presidency this year. It has finally come to this, that Kelly working with or against the democrats means defeat for the party. It is therefore time that he was thrown overboard. Every democrat, in or out of New York, who desires the welfare of the party, will commend the gentlemen who have taken the stand against the Tammany dictator. We hope the movement will be joined by all.

THE CABLE, this morning, brings news of the death of two noted Englishmen—Sir Hon. Alexander Cockburn, lord chief justice, and Field Marshal Charles Yorke, G. C. B., lieutenant of the Tower of London. The last named lived in two centuries, having been born two years before the beginning of this. He was a soldier, and the son of a soldier, and up to within a few years served in most of the wars in which England has been engaged. He behaved gallantly in the Peninsular war, was present at Vimiera, Salamanca, Vittoria, at the siege of Ciudad and Badajoz, and at the battle of Waterloo. He also served in the Kaffir war of 1852-3, and received "the war medal with ten clasps." Of late years Sir Charles spent his time in repose, his duties as constable of the tower requiring no labor, but supplying him a fair salary. Chief Justice Cockburn possessed one of the finest legal minds of this or any other age, and his rulings and interpretations of the law will go down to posterity as among the ablest ever given. As a boy he made his mark in the world, and displayed marked evidence of the ability which characterized his life. He had held several high positions in the judiciary, and was twice attorney general, and on the death of Chief Justice Justice, in 1856, was created chief justice of the common pleas. In 1859 he was advanced to the high office of Lord Chief Justice of England, which position he held at the time of his death. Justice Cockburn was the arbitrator on the part of Great Britain in the settlement of the Alabama claims, and had it not been for his skill and ability, the chances are that government would have had more British millions on hand, left from the excessive Geneva award. Lord Cockburn was 78 years of age.

RH. ALEXANDER GALT, the celebrated Canadian financier, proposes a plan for the settlement of the Irish land troubles, which if carried into effect, would be happily successful. He wants to take the Irish to Canada, and is completing arrangements for that purpose. It must be evident that on the "Old Sod" they will never be content. For centuries the Irish people have indulged in the same kind of quarrelling that is going on now. At times there have been brief rests, just to enable them to "spit or their hands" for another time, but never since England conquered the land has there been peace between the two countries. If the Irish nature at home has not been able to change during all these long generations we have no reason to expect it will do so hereafter. In other lands the Irish at once become a different race, in America, particularly are they good citizens, loyal to the government, industrious, quiet and prosperous. They seemingly forget the old grudges, bred and born in them, and look at matters with cooler heads and with a degree of wisdom that they are unable to command at home. It is the vainest of vain hopes for the Irish to expect to restore the independence of their native land. The English grip upon the island is as firm as is the hold upon Wales or Scotland, and must remain so long as there is a British empire. It might even be questioned if the Irish would be happy or even quiet for a week were they free and independent as ever. It was their own natural disposition to quarrel that lost them their nation, and as there has been no change in their natures since, would not disputes among themselves again lead to misfortune? This Parnell Land League agitation is only one of a long series of Irishisms. Little or no good to the people can come from it. Indeed, actual injury is more likely to be the final outcome. If Mr. Galt could induce about nine-tenths of the Irish people to settle in Canada, their condition would be wonderfully improved. The very large majority of all the Irish who have come to America are vastly better off in every respect than they were or could possibly have been had they remained at home.
